

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

BILLIE JO SAENZ,

No. 2:15-CV-0219-JTR

Plaintiff,

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

CAROLYN W. COLVIN,
Commissioner of Social Security,

Defendant.

BEFORE THE COURT are cross-motions for summary judgment. ECF No. 15, 23. Attorney Dana C. Madsen represents Billie Jo Sanez (Plaintiff); Special Assistant United States Attorney Danielle R. Mroczek represents the Commissioner of Social Security (Defendant). The parties have consented to proceed before a magistrate judge. ECF No. 6. After reviewing the administrative record and briefs filed by the parties, the Court GRANTS Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment and DENIES Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment.

JURISDICTION

Plaintiff filed applications for a period of disability, Disability Insurance Benefits (DIB), and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) in August 2012, alleging disability since June 1, 1995, due to back pain, neck pain, migraines, anxiety,

1 depression, shoulder problems, numbness in left arm, and PTSD. Tr. 302-317, 2 359. Plaintiff later amended her onset date to November 1, 2009. Tr. 59.
 3 Plaintiff's applications were denied initially and upon reconsideration.

4 Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Moira Ausems held a hearing on 5 November 5, 2013, Tr. 56-109, and issued an unfavorable decision on March 12, 6 2014, Tr. 22-36. The Appeals Council denied review on June 30, 2015. Tr. 1-7.
 7 The ALJ's March 2014 decision thus became the final decision of the 8 Commissioner, which is appealable to the district court pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 9 405(g). Plaintiff filed this action for judicial review on August 28, 2015. ECF No.
 10 1, 4.

11 STATEMENT OF FACTS

12 The facts of the case are set forth in the administrative hearing transcript, the 13 ALJ's decision, and the briefs of the parties. They are only briefly summarized 14 here.

15 Plaintiff was born on February 22, 1969, and was 40 years old on the alleged 16 disability onset date, November 1, 2009. Tr. 59, 304. Plaintiff obtained her GED 17 in 1996, Tr. 360, and later received vocational training in cosmetology, Tr. 67-68.
 18 Plaintiff has past work as a home health aide, kitchen helper, fast foods worker, 19 sandwich maker, cashier, and dietary aide. Tr. 66-67, 99, 347. She indicated she 20 stopped working on November 30, 2009, because of her condition. Tr. 346.

21 At the administrative hearing, Plaintiff testified she has problems with 22 migraines (at least six per month), back pain and numbness in her left arm. Tr. 69-23 70, 84. She stated she also has sciatic nerve problems that occasionally prevent her 24 from walking as her legs will go numb. Tr. 71, 78. Plaintiff additionally indicated 25 she had been attending counseling sessions through Catholic Charities for her 26 PTSD, anxiety, depression and nightmares. Tr. 85-86.

27 Plaintiff testified she has had Botox injections to treat her migraine 28 headaches. Tr. 76. However, she stated she had an adverse reaction to the shots

1 that resulted in two trips to the emergency room on May 20, 2011. Tr. 76. She 2 described the reaction as feeling like a stroke: her left side went numb, she could 3 not lift her neck or chin for a period of six to nine months, and she had resultant 4 memory and concentration issues. Tr. 76-77. She additionally had difficulty 5 speaking and swallowing. Tr. 77.

6 Plaintiff testified she gets up early and walks her 15-year-old daughter to the 7 bus stop every morning before school. Tr. 74. While she has a driver's license, 8 she had not driven in over a year because of a lack of range of motion in her neck.
9 Tr. 75.

10 Plaintiff stated she had a severe alcohol problem for many years, was sober 11 for ten years, then relapsed in 2008 for a period of five years. Tr. 86-90. At the 12 time of the administrative hearing, she reported she had been sober for 16 months, 13 since July 4, 2012.

14 STANDARD OF REVIEW

15 The ALJ is responsible for determining credibility, resolving conflicts in 16 medical testimony, and resolving ambiguities. Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 17 1039 (9th Cir. 1995). The ALJ's determinations of law are reviewed de novo, 18 although deference is owed to a reasonable construction of the applicable statutes.
19 McNatt v. Apfel, 201 F.3d 1084, 1087 (9th Cir. 2000). The decision of the ALJ 20 may be reversed only if it is not supported by substantial evidence or if it is based 21 on legal error. Tackett v. Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1097 (9th Cir. 1999). Substantial 22 evidence is defined as being more than a mere scintilla, but less than a 23 preponderance. Id. at 1098. Put another way, substantial evidence is such relevant 24 evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.
25 Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971). If the evidence is susceptible to 26 more than one rational interpretation, the court may not substitute its judgment for 27 that of the ALJ. Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1097; Morgan v. Commissioner of Social Sec.
28 Admin., 169 F.3d 595, 599 (9th Cir. 1999). Nevertheless, a decision supported by

1 substantial evidence will be set aside if the proper legal standards were not applied 2 in weighing the evidence and making the decision. Brawner v. Secretary of Health
 3 and Human Services, 839 F.2d 432, 433 (9th Cir. 1988). If substantial evidence 4 supports the administrative findings, or if conflicting evidence supports a finding 5 of either disability or non-disability, the ALJ's determination is conclusive.
 6 Sprague v. Bowen, 812 F.2d 1226, 1229-1230 (9th Cir. 1987).

7 SEQUENTIAL EVALUATION PROCESS

8 The Commissioner has established a five-step sequential evaluation process 9 for determining whether a person is disabled. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a), 10 416.920(a); see, Bowen v. Yuckert, 482 U.S. 137, 140-142 (1987). In steps one 11 through four, the burden of proof rests upon the claimant to establish a prima facie 12 case of entitlement to disability benefits. Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1098-1099. This 13 burden is met once a claimant establishes that a physical or mental impairment
 14 prevents him from engaging in his previous occupation. 20 C.F.R. §§ 15 404.1520(a)(4), 416.920(a)(4). If a claimant cannot do his past relevant work, the 16 ALJ proceeds to step five, and the burden shifts to the Commissioner to show that 17 (1) the claimant can make an adjustment to other work; and (2) specific jobs exist 18 in the national economy which claimant can perform. Batson v. Commissioner of 19 Social Sec. Admin., 359 F.3d 1190, 1193-1194 (2004). If a claimant cannot make 20 an adjustment to other work in the national economy, a finding of "disabled" is 21 made. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(v), 416.920(a)(4)(v).

22 ADMINISTRATIVE DECISION

23 The ALJ found at step one that Plaintiff had not engaged in substantial 24 gainful activity since November 1, 2009, the alleged onset date. Tr. 24. At step 25 two, the ALJ determined Plaintiff had the following severe impairments: migraine 26 headache disorder; cervical strain and arthralgia; left shoulder impingement with 27 capsulitis; anxiety disorder; pain disorder associated with both psychological 28 factors and general medical condition; post-traumatic stress disorder; personality

1 disorder with cluster B traits; and history of polysubstance abuse disorder in 2 reported remission. TR. 25.

3 At step three, the ALJ found Plaintiff did not have an impairment or 4 combination of impairments that meets or medically equals the severity of one of 5 the listed impairments. Tr. 26. The ALJ assessed Plaintiff's RFC and determined 6 she could perform a restricted range of light exertion level work. Tr. 28. The ALJ 7 found Plaintiff is not able to climb ladders, ropes, or scaffolds; is precluded from 8 left overhead reaching; can occasionally reach overhead on the right; can perform 9 no more than lower semiskilled tasks; can have no more than brief superficial 10 contact with the general public; and can have no cooperative teamwork endeavors 11 with coworkers. Tr. 28.

12 At step four, the ALJ found Plaintiff was unable to perform her past relevant 13 work as a home health aide, kitchen helper, fast food worker, sandwich maker, 14 cashier, or dietary aide. Tr. 34. However, at step five, the ALJ determined that, 15 considering Plaintiff's age, education, work experience and RFC, and based on the 16 testimony of the vocational expert, Plaintiff was capable of making a successful 17 adjustment to other work that exists in significant numbers in the national 18 economy, including the jobs of laundry folder, small parts assembler and cafeteria 19 attendant. Tr. 34-35. The ALJ thus concluded Plaintiff was not under a disability 20 within the meaning of the Social Security Act at any time from November 1, 2009, 21 the alleged onset date, through the date of the ALJ's decision, March 12, 2014.

22 ISSUES

23 The question presented is whether substantial evidence supports the ALJ's 24 decision denying benefits and, if so, whether that decision is based on proper legal 25 standards. Plaintiff contends the ALJ erred in this case by (1) failing to provide 26 specific, clear and convincing reasons for discrediting Plaintiff's symptom 27 allegations; and (2) failing to give weight to the medical opinions of Drs. Everhart, 28 Pollack and Goodman.

DISCUSSION

A. Plaintiff's Credibility

Plaintiff first contends the ALJ erred by failing to provide valid reasons for finding Plaintiff not fully credible in this case. ECF No. 15 at 14-20.

5 It is the province of the ALJ to make credibility determinations. Andrews v.
6 Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 1995). However, the ALJ's findings must be 7 supported by specific cogent reasons. Rashad v. Sullivan, 903 F.2d 1229, 1231 8 (9th Cir. 1990). Once the claimant produces medical evidence of an underlying 9 medical impairment, the ALJ may not discredit testimony as to the severity of an 10 impairment because it is unsupported by medical evidence. Reddick v. Chater, 157 11 F.3d 715, 722 (9th Cir. 1998). Absent affirmative evidence of malingering, the 12 ALJ's reasons for rejecting the claimant's testimony must be "specific, clear and 13 convincing." Smolen v. Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1281 (9th Cir. 1996); Lester v.
14 Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 834 (9th Cir. 1995). "General findings are insufficient:
15 rather the ALJ must identify what testimony is not credible and what evidence 16 undermines the claimant's complaints." Lester, 81 F.3d at 834; Dodrill v. Shalala, 17 12 F.3d 915, 918 (9th Cir. 1993).

18 In this case, the ALJ found Plaintiff's medically determinable impairments 19 could reasonably be expected to cause some of the alleged symptoms; however, 20 Plaintiff's statements concerning the intensity, persistence and limiting effects of 21 these symptoms were not entirely credible. Tr. 28.

22 The ALJ first determined the objective medical evidence of record did not 23 fully support the level of limitation claimed by Plaintiff. Tr. 28-29. A lack of 24 supporting objective medical evidence is a factor which may be considered in 25 evaluating an individual's credibility, provided it is not the sole factor. Bunnell v.
26 Sullivan, 347 F.2d 341, 345 (9th Cir. 1991); see also Lingenfelter v. Astrue, 504 27 F.3d 1028, 1040 (9th Cir. 2007) (in determining credibility, ALJ may consider 28 "whether the alleged symptoms are consistent with the medical evidence"). The

1 ALJ additionally pointed out the effectiveness of medication in alleviating 2 Plaintiff's symptoms in this case. Tr. 29. An ALJ may rely on the effectiveness of 3 treatment to find a plaintiff's testimony unpersuasive. Morgan v. Comm'r of 4 Social Sec. Admin., 169 F.3d 595, 600 (9th Cir. 1999) (finding an ALJ may 5 properly rely on a report that a plaintiff's mental symptoms improved with the use 6 of medication); Odle v. Heckler, 707 F.2d 439, 440 (9th Cir. 1983) (noting 7 impairments that are controlled by treatment cannot be considered disabling).

8 The ALJ noted Botox injections helped relieve Plaintiff's headache 9 symptoms and Plaintiff was feeling better in April 2010 after receiving the 10 injections. Tr. 29, 400. Plaintiff reported she was convinced the Botox injections 11 were helping more than ever as treatment for her migraines in December 2010, and 12 Plaintiff stated the injections continued to relieve her migraine headache symptoms 13 in February 2011. Tr. 29, 396-397. As stated by the ALJ, despite Plaintiff's 14 complaints about neurological symptoms on one occasion following the injections, 15 Tr. 76-77, the record did not reflect objective findings to explain the symptoms, Tr.
16 29, 406-408, and no medical source of record specifically concluded the alleged 17 symptoms were the result of the Botox injections, Tr. 407 ("head drooping 18 secondary to brushing her teeth could be secondary to the Botox but the other 19 symptoms do not seem consistent with Botox"), 612 ("It's unclear whether this is a 20 reaction to Botox or more from stress or anxiety or whether patient has some 21 underlying problem going on such as hypothyroidism or some other infectious 22 disorder.").

23 The ALJ also indicated Plaintiff reported pain medication was effective in 24 reducing her cervical spine and overall pain, and medication also helped relieve her 25 anxiety symptoms. Tr. 29, 453-454. Moreover, with regard to her complaints of 26 back pain, imaging of her cervical and lumbar spine was unremarkable, Tr. 689, 27 695, and an examination performed in April 2013 was negative for fracture or joint 28 swelling, Tr. 700. Tr. 29.

1 As determined by the ALJ, the evidence of record does not support the 2 disabling symptoms and limitations alleged by Plaintiff in this case. In addition, 3 the record reflects the effectiveness of medication in alleviating Plaintiff's alleged 4 pain and other symptoms. It was proper for the ALJ to conclude Plaintiff's was 5 not entirely credible because Plaintiff's alleged level of limitation was not 6 consistent with the medical evidence and records reflect her symptoms improved 7 with the use of medication.

8 The ALJ next indicated evidence of drug seeking behavior existed in the 9 record. Tr. 29. An ALJ may consider evidence of a claimant's drug seeking 10 behavior in assessing credibility. See Edlund v. Massanari, 253 F.3d 1152, 1157
11 (9th Cir. 2001). The ALJ noted Plaintiff's treating physician, Francis J. Goodman, 12 M.D., indicated on October 12, 2010, that while Plaintiff seemed to be doing well 13 with seven Percocet a day, there was a "low suspicion" of drug abuse. Tr. 29, 463.
14 The ALJ also noted Plaintiff requested an early refill of her narcotic medication in 15 August 2010. Tr. 29, 471 (Dr. Goodman reported Plaintiff "presents today because 16 she had lost her hydrocodone. The patient had gotten an early refill to go camping 17 in Montana. The patient states that it got mixed in with other garbage and was 18 accidentally thrown out by her mother. . . . She is requesting a refill of her 19 hydrocodone. Patient was reminded of our refill policy of no refills for lost or 20 stolen medication."). As indicated by the ALJ, Plaintiff had also admitted to prior 21 legal problems "because of drugs and theft." Tr. 29, 763. It was proper for the 22 ALJ to find the suggestion of drug seeking behavior in the record weakened 23 Plaintiff's overall credibility.

24 The ALJ further noted the record reveals Plaintiff had worked/attended 25 school with the allegedly disabling impairments. Tr. 29. Attending school is an 26 activity which is inconsistent with an alleged inability to perform work. Matthews 27 v. Shalala, 10 F.3d 678, 680 (9th Cir. 1993). In September 2010, Plaintiff was 28 attending cosmetology school, working nine hours per day, often standing up

1 cutting hair and doing other tasks. Tr. 29, 468. As of October 2010, Plaintiff was 2 attending cosmetology school six days a week, full-time, and planned to continue 3 to do so for the following six to nine months. Tr. 29, 463. The fact that the record 4 reflects Plaintiff was able to attend school full-time, as documented by the ALJ, is 5 a valid reason for the ALJ to discount Plaintiff's assertion of disabling symptoms.

6 The ALJ next noted Plaintiff reported she last worked at Gonzaga and left 7 because she felt "harassed," and concluded that the fact Plaintiff quit working for 8 reasons unrelated to her impairments detracted from her credibility, Tr. 29, 66-67.
9 The inability to work due to nondisability factors is a valid basis for rejecting a 10 claimant's credibility. Bruton v. Massanari, 268 F.3d 824, 828 (9th Cir. 2001) 11 (stating that in making a credibility determination, the ALJ did not err by 12 considering that claimant left his job because he was laid off, rather than because 13 he was injured). The ALJ properly discounted Plaintiff's credibility on the basis 14 that she stopped working for reasons unrelated to her alleged disabling 15 impairments.

16 The ALJ also indicated secondary gain issues may be present in this case.
17 Tr. 30. The Ninth Circuit has recognized that the ALJ may consider the issue of 18 secondary gain in rejecting symptom testimony. Tidwell v. Apfel, 161 F.3d 599, 19 602 (9th Cir. 1998); Gaddis v. Chater, 76 F.3d 893, 896 (8th Cir. 1996) (allowing 20 an ALJ to judge credibility based on a strong element of secondary gain); Matney 21 v. Sullivan, 981 F.2d 1016, 1020 (9th Cir. 1992) (the ALJ may properly consider 22 the issue of motivation in assessing credibility). The ALJ noted Plaintiff expressed 23 concern over finances in August 2011, Tr. 30, 604, and during her psychological 24 evaluation with Jonathan W. Anderson, Ph.D., on September 6, 2011, Tr. 30, 569.
25 On September 11, 2011, Dr. Goodman indicated Plaintiff was applying for 26 permanent disability and reported she "needs a note saying that she currently is 27 disabled and cannot continue to work." Tr. 30, 602. The ALJ found these 28 examples suggest Plaintiff could be attempting to portray more extensive

1 limitations than are actually present in order to increase the chance of obtaining 2 benefits. Tr. 30. This is another permissible basis for the ALJ to find Plaintiff less 3 than fully credible in this case.

4 The ALJ lastly found Plaintiff's daily activities were inconsistent with her 5 assertion of disability. Tr. 30. It is well-established that the nature of daily 6 activities may be considered when evaluating credibility. Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 7 597, 603 (9th Cir. 1989). The ALJ indicated records show Plaintiff identified 8 cooking as her hobby and that she filled her day "cleaning house and cooking," Tr.
9 569; she was able to go camping in Montana in August 2010, Tr. 471; she walked 10 daily and used the bus for transportation, Tr. 762; she could walk six blocks before 11 needing to stop, Tr. 762; and she attended alcoholics anonymous meetings and 12 medical appointments during the week, Tr. 763. Tr. 30. As noted by the 13 Commissioner, such activities contradict Plaintiff's allegations that she could stand 14 for less than ten to fifteen minutes, was unable to lift her left arm above shoulder 15 height, and lacked energy to work. ECF No. 23 at 11; Tr. 70, 380, 685, 689. It 16 was proper for the ALJ to consider this level of activity as inconsistent with 17 Plaintiff's claim of totally disabling limitations. See Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 18 1104, 1112-1113 (9th Cir. 2012).

19 The ALJ is responsible for reviewing the evidence and resolving conflicts or 20 ambiguities in testimony. Magallanes v. Bowen, 881 F.2d 747, 751 (9th Cir.
21 1989). It is the role of the trier of fact, not this Court, to resolve conflicts in 22 evidence. Richardson, 402 U.S. at 400. The Court has a limited role in 23 determining whether the ALJ's decision is supported by substantial evidence and 24 may not substitute its own judgment for that of the ALJ even if it might justifiably 25 have reached a different result upon de novo review. 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). After 26 reviewing the record, the Court finds that the ALJ provided ample clear and 27 convincing reasons for discounting Plaintiff's subjective complaints, which are 28

1 fully supported by the record. Accordingly, the ALJ did not err by finding 2 Plaintiff's allegations were not entirely credible in this case.

3 B. Medical Source Opinions

4 Plaintiff next contends that the ALJ erred by failing to accord proper weight 5 to the opinions of certain medical sources regarding her physical and psychological 6 limitations. Plaintiff specifically argues the ALJ erred by discounting the opinions
7 of Joyce Everhart, Ph.D, Dennis Pollack, Ph.D, and Francis Goodman, M.D. ECF
8 No. 15 at 20-23.

9 In disability proceedings, a treating physician's opinion carries more weight 10 than an examining physician's opinion, and an examining physician's opinion is 11 given more weight than that of a non-examining physician. Benecke v. Barnhart, 12 379 F.3d 587, 592 (9th Cir. 2004); Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir.
13 1995). If the treating or examining physician's opinions are not contradicted, they 14 can be rejected only with clear and convincing reasons. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830. If 15 contradicted, the opinion can only be rejected for "specific" and "legitimate" 16 reasons that are supported by substantial evidence in the record. Andrews v.
17 Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1043 (9th Cir. 1995). Historically, the courts have 18 recognized conflicting medical evidence, the absence of regular medical treatment 19 during the alleged period of disability, and the lack of medical support for doctors' 20 reports based substantially on a claimant's subjective complaints of pain as 21 specific, legitimate reasons for disregarding a treating or examining physician's 22 opinion. Flaten v. Secretary of Health and Human Servs., 44 F.3d 1453, 1463-23 1464 (9th Cir. 1995); Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 597, 604 (9th Cir. 1989).

24 Here, the ALJ found that although Plaintiff has severe impairments, the 25 objective medical evidence did not support the degree of limitation alleged by 26 Plaintiff. The ALJ determined Plaintiff retained the RFC to a restricted range of 27 light exertion level work. Tr. 28. The ALJ found Plaintiff is not able to climb 28 ladders, ropes, or scaffolds; is precluded from left overhead reaching; can

1 occasionally reach overhead on the right; can perform no more than lower 2 semiskilled tasks; can have no more than brief superficial contact with the general 3 public; and can have no cooperative teamwork endeavors with coworkers. Tr. 28.
 4 The Court finds the ALJ's interpretation of the medical record is supported by 5 substantial evidence. See infra.

6 1. Joyce Everhart, Ph.D.

7 Plaintiff contends the ALJ erred by failing to accord proper weight to the 8 October 11, 2012, psychological assessment of Dr. Everhart. ECF No. 15 at 21.
 9 Plaintiff, however, does not specifically assert which particular opinions of Dr.
 10 Everhart the ALJ erroneously rejected. See Greenwood v. FAA, 28 F.3d 971, 977 11 (9th Cir. 1994) ("We review only issues which are argued specifically and 12 distinctly in a party's opening brief." (Citations omitted)); Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 13 1161 n.2 ("issues not argued with specificity in briefing will not be addressed").
 14 Nevertheless, the Court has reviewed the ALJ's rationale for failing to fully credit 15 Dr. Everhart and shall herein discuss the ALJ's determination in this regard.

16 Dr. Everhart completed a psychological assessment on October 11, 2012.
 17 Tr. 681-687. Dr. Everhart diagnosed Plaintiff with pain disorder associated with 18 both psychological factors and a general medical condition; history of post-19 traumatic stress disorder; alcohol dependence in early full remission, per self-20 report; cocaine dependence in sustained full remission, per self-report; and 21 cognitive disorder, NOS. Tr. 685-686. She assessed a current Global Assessment 22 of Functioning (GAF) score of 50.¹ Tr. 686. Dr. Everhart opined that Plaintiff did

24 ¹Although Dr. Everhart assigned a GAF score of 50, an ALJ has no 25 obligation to credit or even consider GAF scores in a disability determination. See 26 65 Fed. Reg. 50746, 50764-50765 (Aug. 21, 2000) ("The GAF scale . . . does not 27 have a direct correlation to the severity requirements in our mental disorders 28 listings."). In fact, the GAF scale is no longer included in the DSM-V: "It was

1 not need help to complete her activities of daily living; her attention, concentration, 2 and intellectual ability appeared to be within normal limits; testing suggested she 3 would have difficulty with executive functioning; she had the ability to listen, 4 understand, remember and follow simple directions but would likely have 5 difficulty with complex multistep tasks; she would likely do best if she does not 6 have to interact with the public and does not have to interact closely with 7 supervisors and coworkers; her persistence and pace were good; and she remains 8 on task and does not appear easily distracted. Tr. 686.

9 The Court notes at the outset that the limitations assessed by Dr. Everhart do 10 not appear to conflict with the ALJ's ultimate RFC determination which restricts 11 Plaintiff to performing no more than lower semiskilled tasks with no more than 12 brief superficial contact with the general public and no cooperative teamwork 13 endeavors with coworkers. Tr. 28. However, the ALJ did assign "little weight" to 14 the opinion because it was a one-time evaluation, was unsupported by the weight 15 of the record evidence and contradicted by Plaintiff's significant activities of daily 16 living that she reported to Dr. Everhart. Tr. 31.

17 With regard to the weight of the evidence of record, the ALJ noted Dr.
 18 Anderson, completed a psychological evaluation on September 6, 2011, which was 19 accorded "substantial weight." Tr. 30; 565-572. Dr. Anderson opined that 20 Plaintiff had the ability to follow both two and three step commands with little 21 difficulty, she did not have problems following conversation, her insight was good, 22 and, although Plaintiff alleged pain, she may have overrepresented her pain level 23 as she did not demonstrate pain behaviors during the assessment. Tr. 30, 570-572.

24
 25 recommended that the GAF be dropped from the DSM-5 for several reasons, 26 including its conceptual lack of clarity (i.e., including symptoms, suicide risk, and 27 disabilities in its descriptors) and questionable psychometrics in routine practice."
 28 Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders-V, 16 (5th ed. 2013).

1 Dr. Anderson found that Plaintiff did not show difficulty sustaining attention and 2 persisted in tasks with adequate pace. Tr. 30, 572. Dr. Anderson concluded 3 Plaintiff could sustain work-related activities but would benefit from a position that 4 did not require significant adaptation to change or was fast-paced. Tr. 30, 572.

5 Larry Kravitz, Ph.D., a medical expert, was accorded substantial weight by 6 the ALJ. Tr. 32-33, 791-799. On November 19, 2013, Dr. Kravitz reviewed the 7 entire record and answered interrogatory questions presented by the ALJ. Id. Dr.
8 Kravitz identified Plaintiff's impairments as substance abuse, somatization, 9 cognitive disorder, personality disorder, posttraumatic stress disorder, major 10 depressive disorder and pain disorder. Tr. 32, 792. Dr. Kravitz noted personality 11 testing suggested possible exaggeration of symptoms and indicated Dr. Pollack's 12 assessment of marked limitations could be attributed to Plaintiff's physical and 13 pain complaints. Tr. 33, 799. He opined Plaintiff would be able to understand, 14 remember and carry out simple and some detailed instructions and persist on at 15 least simple, routine work tasks mentally to completion; she appeared able to 16 interact appropriately with others in brief and uncomplicated communications; and 17 she would function best in a work environment with only occasional contact with 18 others and no more than routine day-to-day work stressors. Tr. 33, 799.

19 In October 2012, state agency reviewing psychologist, James Bailey, Ph.D., 20 opined that the evidence of record, including the examinations and Plaintiff's 21 activities of daily living, supported Plaintiff's ability to understand, remember and 22 carry out simple work tasks and instructions. Tr. 33, 148. Dr. Bailey indicated the 23 evidence showed Plaintiff was able to maintain persistence and pace for a 40-hour 24 workweek, completing simple work tasks and procedures with superficial co-25 worker coordination. Tr. 33, 149. He opined Plaintiff would work best with 26 limited general public interactions and superficial social interactions with co-27 workers and supervisors and in a predictable environment with minor changes and 28 variations. Tr. 33, 149. On February 15, 2013, state agency reviewing

1 psychologist Richard Borton, Ph.D., agreed with Dr. Bailey's assessment that 2 Plaintiff could complete simple work tasks and instructions during a 40-hour
3 workweek. Tr. 34, 176-178. The ALJ gave the state agency assessments
4 significant weight. Tr. 34.

5 As determined by the ALJ, the longitudinal medical evidence does not 6 support Dr. Everhart's assessed limitations. Specifically, Dr. Everhart's indication 7 that Plaintiff "is likely to do best" with no public contact and no close interactions 8 with supervisors and coworkers, Tr. 686, is inconsistent with the weight of the 9 record evidence, which demonstrates Plaintiff is capable of performing work with 10 limited general public interactions and superficial social interactions with co-11 workers and supervisors, Tr. 149, 177, 572, 799.

12 With respect to the activities of daily living reported to Dr. Everhart, it was 13 reported that Plaintiff was involved in the organized activity of going to church 14 every Saturday and going to AA meetings at least once a week. Tr. 685. Dr.
15 Everhart noted that, on a typical day, Plaintiff wakes up at 6:30 a.m., meditates and 16 prays, takes her medications and drinks coffee, then plans her day. Tr. 685.
17 Plaintiff does her chores of cleaning the kitchen, which included four extra deep 18 cleaning chores such as scrubbing the walls and cupboards, and doing her laundry.
19 Tr. 685. Plaintiff reported to Dr. Everhart that she loved to cook, but did not cook 20 very much at the shelter she was currently staying at with her daughter. Tr. 685.
21 At the end of the day, Plaintiff liked to relax, listen to music, read and watch 22 television before going to bed at 10:00 p.m. Tr. 685. As determined by the ALJ, 23 these reported activities, and most significantly Plaintiff's ability to attend church 24 and AA meetings weekly, conflicted with Dr. Everhart's indication that Plaintiff 25 "is likely to do best" with no public contact and no close interactions with 26 supervisors and coworkers. Tr. 686.

27 The ALJ accorded Dr. Everhart's opinion "little weight" because it was 28 inconsistent with the weight of the record evidence and was contradicted by the 1 significant activities of daily living reported to Dr. Everhart and other medical 2 providers. Tr. 31. These are clear and convincing reasons that are supported by 3 substantial record evidence. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830. The ALJ did not err with 4 respect to her findings regarding Dr. Everhart's opinion.

5 2. Dennis R. Pollack, Ph.D.

6 Plaintiff next asserts the ALJ erred by failing to accord proper weight to the 7 September 23, 2013, psychological evaluation of Dennis R. Pollack, Ph.D. ECF
 8 No. 15 at 22. However, other than to complain about the ALJ's failure to credit 9 Dr. Pollack's GAF scoring,² Plaintiff again fails to specifically assert which 10 particular opinions of Dr. Pollack the ALJ erroneously rejected. See Greenwood, 11 28 F.3d at 977 ("We review only issues which are argued specifically and 12 distinctly in a party's opening brief." (Citations omitted)); Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 13 1161 n.2 ("issues not argued with specificity in briefing will not be addressed").
 14 The Court has nevertheless reviewed the ALJ's reasons for failing to fully credit 15 the opinions of Dr. Pollack and finds those reasons fully supported. See infra.

16 On September 23, 2013, Dr. Pollack completed a psychological evaluation 17 of Plaintiff. Tr. 760-770. Dr. Pollack found personality test results revealed 18 Plaintiff was likely to present a wide range of psychological problems and 19 neuropsychological testing suggested a neuropsychological deficit. Tr. 765. Dr.
 20 Pollack also filled out a Mental Medical Source Statement form opining Plaintiff 21 had marked limitations in her ability to perform activities within a schedule, 22 maintain regular attendance, and be punctual within customary tolerances and in 23 her ability to complete a normal workday and workweek without interruptions 24 from psychologically based symptoms and to perform at a consistent pace without 25 an unreasonable number and length of rest periods. Tr. 767-769. Dr. Pollack does

27 ²As indicated above, an ALJ has no obligation to credit or even consider 28 GAF scores in a disability determination. See supra.

1 not provide an explanation for these check box opinions other than writing “see 2 report” on the form. Tr. 769; see Crane v. Shalala, 76 F.3d 251, 253 (9th Cir.
3 1996) (stating that the ALJ’s rejection of a check-off report that did not contain an 4 explanation of the bases for the conclusions made was permissible).

5 The ALJ did not accord significant weight to Dr. Pollack’s opinion because 6 the one-time evaluation was not supported by the longitudinal record and was 7 inconsistent with Plaintiff’s daily living activities. Tr. 32. This determination by 8 the ALJ is fully supported.

9 No other medical professional of record has opined that Plaintiff has marked 10 limitations in her concentration and persistence. As discussed above, to the 11 contrary, Dr. Anderson opined that Plaintiff had the ability to follow both two and 12 three step commands with little difficulty, she did not have problems following 13 conversation, her insight was good, and she had no difficulty sustaining attention 14 and persisting in tasks with adequate pace. Tr. 570-572. Dr. Kravitz determined 15 Plaintiff would be able to understand, remember and carry out simple and some 16 detailed instructions and persist on at least simple, routine work tasks mentally to 17 completion. Tr. 799. The state agency reviewers also found that Plaintiff was 18 capable of maintaining persistence and pace for a 40-hour workweek, completing 19 simple work tasks and procedures. Tr. 148-149, 176-178. Dr. Everhart also opined 20 that Plaintiff’s attention, concentration, and intellectual ability were within normal 21 limits and that she had the ability to listen, understand, remember and follow 22 simple directions. Tr. 686. Dr. Everhart found that Plaintiff’s persistence and pace 23 were good and that she remained on task and did not appear easily distracted. Tr.
24 686.

25 As determined by the ALJ, Dr. Pollack’s opinion is not supported by the 26 evidence of record. Tr. 32. Moreover, as indicated by the ALJ, the marked 27 limitations noted in the check-box report are inconsistent with Plaintiff’s daily 28 activities, as more fully discussed above. See supra. The ALJ provided clear and

1 convincing reasons for according little weight to the September 23, 2013, report of 2 Dr. Pollack.

3 3. Francis Goodman, M.D.

4 Plaintiff lastly contends that ALJ erred by affording “no weight” to Dr.
5 Goodman’s “Medical Clearance” statements. ECF No. 15 at 22-23; Tr. 800-803.

6 Dr. Goodman’s July 13, 2011 “Medical Clearance” statement indicates 7 Plaintiff was disabled for work for May, June and July; his September 7, 2011 8 “Medical Clearance” statement states Plaintiff was disabled for work for six 9 months; his January 25, 2012 “Medical Clearance” statement indicates Plaintiff 10 was disabled for work for another six months; and his July 25, 2012 “Medical 11 Clearance” statement opines Plaintiff was disabled for work for another eight 12 months. Tr. 800-803. None of these disability statements by Dr. Goodman 13 individually meet the durational requirement of the Social Security Act. See 42 14 U.S.C. §§ 423(d)(1)(A), 1382c(a)(3)(A) (an individual shall be considered disabled 15 if she has an impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has 16 lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 17 months). Moreover, whether a claimant is “disabled” under the medical and 18 vocational standards of the Social Security Act is a legal determination reserved 19 for the ALJ. See Edlund, 253 F.3d at 1156-1157; Harman v. Apfel, 211 F.3d 1172, 20 1180 (9th Cir. 2000). In any event, as found by the ALJ, these medical clearance 21 statements fail to identify any specific physical or mental functional limitations to 22 support the disability opinion, see Turner v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec., 613 F.3d 1217, 23 1223 (9th Cir. 2010) (noting the rejection of a treating physician’s report was 24 proper when that physician failed to assign any specific limitations on the 25 claimant), and acknowledge that “we are awaiting a determination if patient is 26 employable or permanently disabled.” Tr. 32, 800-803. The ALJ provided clear 27 and convincing reasons for according “no weight” to the medical clearance 28 statements of Dr. Goodman.

1 As stated above, it is the responsibility of the ALJ to determine credibility, 2 resolve conflicts in medical testimony and resolve ambiguities, Saelee, 94 F.3d at 3 522, and this Court may not substitute its own judgment for that of the ALJ, 42
4 U.S.C. § 405(g). Where, as here, the ALJ has made specific findings justifying a 5 decision, and those findings are supported by substantial evidence in the record, 6 this Court's role is not to second-guess that decision. Fair, 885 F.2d at 604. Based 7 on the foregoing, the Court finds the ALJ did not err by accoring little weight to 8 the opinions of Drs. Everhart and Pollack and no weight to Dr. Goodman's 9 "Medical Clearance" statements. The ALJ's RFC determination is supported by 10 substantial evidence.

11 CONCLUSION

12 Having reviewed the record and the ALJ's findings, the Court finds the 13 ALJ's decision is supported by substantial evidence and free of legal error.

14 Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED:

15 1. Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment, ECF No. 23, is 16 GRANTED.

17 2. Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment, ECF No. 15, is DENIED.

18 The District Court Executive is directed to file this Order and provide a copy 19 to counsel for Plaintiff and Defendant. Judgment shall be entered for Defendant
20 and the file shall be CLOSED.
